SPECIAL PIKACHU EDITION

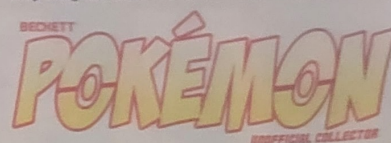

If you're a fan of everyone's favorite electric mouse, Pikachu (who isn't?), you're going to love this issue of Beckett Pokémon Unofficial Collector, as it's almost entirely dedicated to Pikachu!

Have you picked up your copy of Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver yet? If not, what are you waiting for? For all you gamers out there, our Pokémon expert, Alex Lucard, takes a look at the Yellow Forest, a special area in the newest Pokémon games where you can catch special types of Pikachu? Have you ever wanted a surfing Pikachu? How about a Pikachu with Fly? Well you can have those and more, so be sure to check out Alex's article on the Yellow Forest (pg. 12).

Pikachu has appeared on many Pokémon TCG cards over the years – from the infamous Pikachu misprint with red cheeks to the Happy Birthday Pikachu, our Pokémon TCG guru Michael Lucas takes a look at the coolest Pikachu cards released in different sets over the years (pg. 26).

Finally, we have big news regarding the future of Beckett Pokémon Unofficial Collector – effective immediately the magazine will be running bimonthly. This is great news, since it will give us a better opportunity to deliver the Pokémon stories that matter most to the dedicated Pokémon fans and introduce some new content, such as our Pokémon in Japan feature, for our loyal fans.

Happy reading!

Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver sell over 8 million

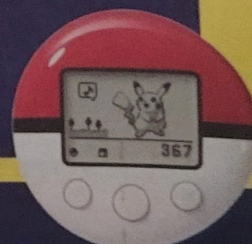

After closing out its fiscal year on March 31, Nintendo has announced it sold 8.4 million copies of Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver worldwide since their release in Japan in September 2009 – that breaks down to 3.84 million copies in Japan and 4.62 million copies outside of Japan. What makes these numbers even more impressive is that a large portion of the 4.62 million was sold in the U.S. and Europe within the span of a couple weeks. Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver was released March 17 in the U.S. and March 26 in Europe. Despite being far away from the record of over 20 million copies sold of Pokémon Red, Blue, and Green, these sales numbers are still quite impressive, especially for a remake of Pokémon games that are over 10 years old.

Winner's Path Pokéwalker route available

Players of Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver will have something special to look forward to all throughout the months of May and June. For a limited time, players will be able to unlock the PokéWalker Route via Wi-Fi – you'll need to hurry though, as the distribution ends June 25! What makes this route special is that Pokémon with moves they normally can't learn can be caught. For example, you can catch a Munchlax with Selfdestruct or a Horsea with Muddy Water. Some very rare items can also be obtained, such as Focus Sash and Choice Band. Players in Japan had the same opportunity earlier this year in January to unlock the Winner's Path Pokéwalker route.

POKEMON IN JAPAN

THE LATEST HAPPENINGS FROM THE FAR EAST

By Sean Cooper

Pokémon Black and White starters revealed

With the 5th-generation Pokémon RPG set to be released fall 2010 in Japan on the Nintendo DS, several key details have been revealed about the newest Pokémon adventure. Pokémon Black and White will feature three new starter Pokémon: Tsutarja (Grass-type), a grass snake Pokémon with the ability Overgrow, Pokabu (Fire-type), a fire pig Pokémon with the ability Blaze, and Mijumaru (Water-type), a sea otter Pokémon with the ability Torrent.

That's not all; details about the two protagonists have been revealed. As with previous Pokémon games, you can choose between a male and female character. However, this time around, the characters are older than the traditional age of 10, when trainers receive their starter Pokémon.

In Pokémon Black and White, your adventure takes place in the region of Iishi, which is distant from the familiar Pokémon regions like Kanto and Johto. A slew of new Pokémon inhabit in this new region. The new region is unique – it appears to be a hybrid between metropolis and nature. The tall skyscrapers take full advantage of the Nintendo DS's graphic capabilities. At the heart of your adventure is Hiun City, which directly translates as "misfortune," and this metropolitan center is sure to play a prominent role in your adventure. As revealed May 16 on Pokémon Sunday, Hiun City will be very interactive – characters in the city will actually run and walk around you as you wander around, a huge step up from past Pokémon games. You will also be able to enter buildings at the side, a first for Pokémon games.

If you aren't able to travel to Japan to see the movie in person, be sure to check it out when it heads to directly to DVD stateside in 2011

Also revealed on Pokémon Sunday was the revamped battle system. Right now, all we know is that the aesthetics have been significantly improved; gone are the static battle sprites, now replaced with interactive sprites that move even when your Pokémon isn't performing a move. The camera also does a better job of adding realism to the battle by moving around, instead of just staying static.

For the latest details on Pokémon Black and White visit the official Japanese website: www.pokemon-sp.jp.

Pokémon Video Game Championship Series

Are you a master in the Pokémon RPG? Do you own a copy of Pokémon HeartGold or SoulSilver? If so, this tournament will definitely interest you. This summer, Pokémon players from the U.S., Western Europe, and Japan will have the opportunity to compete to determine regional champions. The regional competitions will take place each Saturday throughout the month of June. Once the regional champions have been crowned, the world championship will take place in Hawaii in August.

Check out the official Pokémon Video Game Championship Series website for further details: www.pokemonvgc.com/en/.

13th Pokémon Movie out in Japan this summer

The 13th Pokémon movie and fourth and final movie based on the Diamond and Pearl anime, titled Ruler of Illusions: Zoroark, will premier in Japanese theatres on July 10, 2010. Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver will play a significant role in this movie, as the legendary beasts, Raikou, Suicune, and Entei have starring roles, along with the time-travelling Pokémon Celebi. The first revealed 5th-Generation Pokémon, Zoroark, also plays a significant role; he is destroying Crown City, the city where Ash and his friends are staying for the Pokémon Backer World Cup. Will Celebi be able to stop the rampaging Pokémon or will it be too much for him? Zoroark's unique Illusion ability – which allows it to transform into any Pokémon – is sure to play an important factor in the movie. If you aren't able to travel to Japan to see the movie in person, be sure to check it out when it heads to directly to DVD stateside in 2011.

When the original Pokémon Gold and Silver games came out, I knew that there were two Pokémon I absolutely had to have: Misdreavus, who you sadly couldn't catch until the very end of the game in Mount Silver, and Crobat. I've always been partial to bats, and I was pretty disappointed in the playability of Zubat and Golbat. Crobat is a huge improvement and he remains a very playable Pokémon to this day – in fact, he was one of my main six Pokémon in Pokémon Pearl and is versatile enough to confound people when I play against other trainers instead of the computer. Let's spend this month taking an in-depth look at the one of the fastest Pokémon in the game.

Getting a Crobat

A Golbat evolves into Crobat once its Happiness rating is 220 or higher. Happiness is a hidden stat, so you won't be able to tell the exact Happiness level – certain NPCs will be able to give you a rough idea when you let them look at your Pokémon. Once you hit 220 though, Golbat will evolve the next time it levels up. Crobat has the highest total base stats out of any Poison Pokémon, so if you're a number cruncher and you want a Poison Pokémon, Crobat is definitely your best option.

Crobat Trivia

In the second generation of Pokémon games, Crobat is the fastest Pokémon in the game – this has since changed with the Hoenn and Sinnoh generations, but Crobat remains the fastest Poison-type Pokémon and is tied for second-fastest Flying Pokémon with Aerodactyl, with only Ninjask being faster. The Crobat family of Pokémon is the only one in the game that takes only 1/4 damage from three different move types – Fighting, Bug, and Grass. This makes them very powerful defensive Pokémon, especially when you factor in that they also only take half damage from Poison attacks and are immune to Ground attacks, as well; only Rock, Electric, Psychic and Ice moves are super effective against Crobat, but you should be able to get the first attack in. Crobat's shiny version is a light pinkish-purple, rather than the deep dark purple that it usually comes in.

Although Crobat evolves out of Happiness from bonding with its trainer, the entire Crobat family of evolutions makes up the most commonly encountered Pokémon among the "evil" teams in game such as Rocket, Aqua, Magma, and Galactic. Another interesting thing is that Crobat is a combination of a cross and a bat. This has a bit of irony in it, too, considering that bats are often linked with the folkloric vampire, commonly depicted as being weak against crucifixes, a Christian iconographic object in the shape of a cross.

Brock's Crobat

Brock's Crobat is the first non-Rock Pokémon Brock gets in the anime, although he first captures Zubat in its lowest-stage form of Zubat. He catches Zubat in the episode "Clefaire and the Moon Stone," and it remains a Zubat throughout all of the Kanto and Orange Island anime episodes. It finally evolves into a Golbat in the Johto Journey episode "Hassle in the Castle," 159 episodes later. It then evolves into Crobat just 31 episodes later, in the episode "Control Freak." In this episode, Team Rocket unearths ancient artifacts used to control Pokémon, and only Brock's Golbat is immune, due to its supersonic power. After Golbat is buried alive and Brock digs it out with his own hands, it's just the kickstart Golbat needs for its Happiness level. When it pursues Team Rocket, it evolves into Crobat and single-handedly takes them down. Crobat would be a major Pokémon for Brock until he finally returns home to the Pewter City Gym and leaves his Pokémon in the care of his brother Forrest.

Brock's Zubat holds a lot of records in the anime: It's Brock's only Flying Pokémon, the only Kanto-caught Pokémon to evolve in Johto, and both the first of Brock's Pokémon to evolve, as well as the first to evolve twice. Brock's Crobat would never make it into the video games (although it does show up as Golbat in Pokémon Stadium), but it did eventually get its own TCG card in the Fifth Movie Half Deck, which was released in Japan in 2002 but never made it stateside. This particular Crobat was a Grass Type, and had 60 HP and no resistances. It took double damage from Psychic attacks and had a retreat cost of one Colorless energy. It had two attacks, in Supersonic and Wing Attack. Supersonic did no damage and required only one Colorless energy. Crobat's trainer had to flip a coin – if the coin came up heads, the opposing Pokémon was now Confused, but if it came up tails, the trainer wasted a turn. Wing Attack required one Grass and one Colorless energy. It did a flat 20 damage and had no bonus effects. As you can see, this is a pretty weak card for a stage three evolution, which was more than likely part of the reason it was never translated into English and brought stateside.

Crobat in Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver

Crobat's value has risen significantly with Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver, with the addition of the Pokéathlon – Crobat has a full five stars in Jump and Speed, making it the perfect Pokémon for the Hurdles game. If you're having trouble with this event or are just looking for an easy win, even a fresh Crobat that has never done Pokéathlon events should have no trouble breezing through this event.

If you're looking to add a Crobat to your team, your best option is to find a Zubat early on. You can generally find Golbats in the wild quite easily, but it's better to get a low-level Zubat and work your way up so that you can build that Happiness meter up and watch it evolve at a lower level, rather than at a higher one. There's no benefit to not pushing through the bat family to its final evolution, so sooner rather than later is the way to go. The great thing is that you can get a Zubat before you've even hit that first Gym! Right on Route 31, there's a Dark Cave that is filled with low-level Geodudes and Zubats. If you snag a Zubat here and raise it properly, you'll have a Crobat soon after Zubat becomes a Golbat at level 22 – mine usually evolves around level 25, unless I've really been giving it a ton of items, then it might evolve as quickly as level 23!

(One side note: The Dark Cave is also where you can find Dunsparce, but it's exceedingly rare and you have less than a 1% chance of catching one unless a swarm is occurring. If you do manage to run into one while you're going after that perfect Zubat, remember to do whatever you can to catch it!)

Bat's all, folks!

As we have learned, Crobat is still a very viable Pokémon in this day and age. It's arguably the best overall Poison-type Pokémon and, thanks to its blinding speed, it can be just as effective an attacker as it can be a defensive Pokémon. Treat your Zubat and/or Golbat right and you'll soon have an amazing addition to your Pokémon lineup!

The Pokéwalker is the best place to catch

By Alex Lucard

By now, you're probably quite familiar with the Pokéwalker. Doubtless you have loaded up many a Pokémon onto it in order to catch Pokémon long before you would find them in your HeartGold or SoulSilver cartridge, or you've used it to find Pokémon that can only be obtained through that wondrous little device, like Spiritomb. Well, if you've been obtaining the downloadable content (DLC) for the Johto remakes, then you've also obtained a special Pokéwalker course that can net you multiple versions of Pikachu – some with moves that can only be known by those particular Pikachu. Let's take a look!

From April 1 to May 5, you could download a special Pokéwalker course known as the Yellow Forest. Within this forest there are six types of Pikachu that you can catch – three of which have very special move sets.

The Pikachu are coming

The first set of Pikachu you can receive from the Yellow Forest is your general Pikachu, but at least this allows you to nab one quite early in the game rather than when you arrive in Kanto. You can catch one of these from 0-2,000 steps and each one will be holding a different item, but both will be at level 10. The male Pikachu knows Growl, Tail Whip, Thundershock, and Thunder Wave, while the female Pikachu knows only Thundershock, Growl, and Tail Whip. The male will be holding a Tiny Mushroom, while the female has an Oran Berry.

The rare versions of Pikachu start to show up at 2,001 steps for the male and 5,000 for the female. The male Pikachu is Level 13, holds a Leppa Berry, and has the following move set: Shock Wave, Thunder Wave, Flail, and Helping Hand – it's a little bit higher in level and has a slightly better moveset than the common Pikachu. It's the rare female that you want, though – this Pikachu is Level 12 and holds a Sitrus Berry, but look at its moves: Fake Out, Thundershock, Growl, and Volt Tackle.

In Generation IV, the only way you could have a Pikachu that knows Volt Tackle was by beating the first round of Coliseums in Pokémon Battle Revolution – this would net you a special Volt Tackle Pikachu (and a Surfing Pikachu, for that matter) that you could then breed. You could also import a Generation III Pikachu that knows Volt Tackle, but that's even more complicated. You would need a female Pikachu or Raichu and a Light Ball. You would then need to breed it and the Pichu that would hatch from the egg would know Volt Tackle. Then you would need to import that Volt Tackle Pichu to the Pal Park of Pokémon Diamond, Pearl, or Platinum and then move that Pokémon to HeartGold or SoulSilver if you wanted it there – that's a lot of work for a move that hurts your Pikachu via Recoil Damage when both Pikachu and its evolution Raichu have very little Hit Points to begin with. Now, you can get one rather easily, as long as you're willing to get some exercise. Once you have one, you can just start breeding it.

The rarest Pikachu can be found 9,500 and 10,000 steps, respectively. The ultra-rare female Pikachu is the one that can be found at 9,500 steps. Once caught and imported to your HeartGold or SoulSilver cartridge, you'll find it at Level 14 with a Lum Berry. Its moveset consists of Thunderbolt, Quick Attack, Thunder Wave, and Surf – yes, you read that correctly: a Surfing Pikachu. Surfing Pikachus have occurred before – either through Nintendo events in previous games or rewards through things like Pokémon Stadium or Pokémon Box – but this is the first time you could get unlimited ones just by getting some exercise. Surf is one of the best Water moves in the game, especially if you do a lot of tag battles. In the story mode of the game, this also frees up a slot in your team if you don't want to be saddled with a Water Pokémon. Just have your Surfing Pikachu instead, who has a natural advantage against any wild Water Pokémon you encounter while Surfing. In battles, this move also gives Pikachu protection against Ground-type Pokémon. Usually a Pikachu only knows Electric and Normal attacks, which are weak against ground Pokémon, but a Surfing Pikachu knows a move that is super effective against those types. Factor in that you can give Pikachu a Light Ball to double its Special Attack stat, and if you raise your Surfing Pikachu, it'll be dealing enough damage with Surf to one-hit KO Rock and Ground Pokémon easily. Who needs a Raichu in this case?

Then there's the final Pikachu you can obtain in the Yellow Forest. This Pikachu is a level 15 male and it will be holding a Shuca Berry. Its moveset is Growl, Tail Whip, Thunder, and Fly. Now this is the first time outside of a very rare Generation I event where you could get a Flying Pikachu – it's also a bit unusual. A Surfing Pikachu makes sense as it protects Pikachu against its Ground-type weakness, but it also came about because of a special mini-game in Pokémon Yellow. A Flying Pikachu doesn't have any real practical application aside from giving Pikachu a more versatile moveset. The idea actually came from a brief animation in the Pokémon Yellow opening where a Pikachu is floating with a help of a large collection of balloons. This one simple image would then transfer to the Pokémon Adventures manga where the character Yellow has a Pikachu who would learn Fly. Again, this Pikachu can replace a flier on your team to get through story mode, as well as give opposing Trainers in PvP battles an unwelcome surprise.

What's that on the ground?

Don't forget that there is also the item-finding game that you can play once you've caught your Pikachu of choice. Most of the items aren't that great, like a Big Mushroom or five kinds of berries, but there are four items worth trying to get. A Big Root can be obtained from 4,000-5,000 steps – this item increases life-draining moves like Giga Drain by 30%. A Miracle Seed can be found from steps 5,000-6,000, which is great for your Grass Pokémon. From 6,000 to 7,000 steps you can get a Thunderstone, which is necessary to evolve Pikachu into Raichu. Finally, from 7,000 steps on, you can get a Light Ball, which, as mentioned earlier, doubles both the Attack and Special Attack of a Pikachu, which turns a Pikachu from a middle evolution to a powerful potential – if not long-lasting – contender.

So there you go – now you know how many miles you're going to have to traverse to get your Perfect Pikachu. Remember, you'll be getting in tip-top physical shape while also getting a very rare Pokémon. What's not to love about that win-win situation?

A LOOK BACK AT POKÉMON YELLOW

THE ONE VIDEO GAME WHERE PIKACHU IS THE STAR

By Alex Lucard

Since this is a special Pikachu edition of the magazine, it only makes sense for us to get inside Mr. Peabody's Wayback Machine and take a trip to the year 1999 when the first generational remix game occurred. Sure, these days we all but expect a remake of the newest generational game by the time it comes out – when Pokémon Diamond and Pearl came out, people were already debating what the remix version would have and what it would be called. A decade ago, though, the first remake took everyone by surprise. Not only was this version closer to the anime series that helped make Pokémon so popular in the first place, but it even got rid of your choice of starters and left you with only a single option as your first partner on your long trip to become Pokémon Champion in Pikachu. After 11 years, it's time to take a look back and see how Pokémon Yellow set the standard for what we all know today.

Innovation, thy name is Pikachu

First of all, the starter option for your character has completely changed – in Pokémon Red, Blue, and Green you had a choice of Charmander, Bulbasaur, and Squirtle. Whichever one you chose, your rival would choose the one that was strongest against it. You would also only be able to get the other two starters by trading with friends – as breeding wasn't around in Generation One this was a hard task to accomplish. Pokémon Yellow turned everything on its head. First, your only possible starter was Pikachu. Second, your opponent's starter was an Eevee and the final evolutions would be determined by how well your first two battles against it went. (Remember when Eevee only had three possible final forms?) As well, you would be able to get all three of the normal Kanto starters through normal gameplay, making this the only time this has ever been possible. On the weird side, your Pikachu could not evolve into Raichu and this left him generally underpowered in the endgame – this meant you really had to be a great trainer, rather than just relying on overpowering your opponent by having more levels.

Another change was that Pikachu didn't stay in its Pokéball. Instead, it would follow you around all through Kanto and you could always turn around to talk to it where it would display a range of emotional and visual cues. This was often cited as one of the most popular additions to Pokémon gameplay, yet it would not return until the Johto remakes known as Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver where whomever your lead Pokémon is will follow behind your trainer. It's hard to realize just how far ahead of its time Pokémon Yellow was, but this also shows that Game Freak listens to its fans by finally returning this feature as a core aspect of gameplay.

One thing that was almost unanimously praised about this game that has not made a return to Pokémon video games is the fact that Pokémon Yellow had voice acting. Yes, you read that right – this game used Ikue Otani, the voice actress who plays Pikachu in the anime series both in Japan and North America, to provide voice work for Pikachu in the game! Pikachu made well over a dozen sounds, which might not sound like much, but was amazing for an old Game Boy cart in 1999. This alone made Pokémon Yellow a nominee for several audio video game awards – not because the sound was mind blowing, but because Game Freak had managed to do what no one had thought was possible and put voice acting on a Game Boy cartridge. Unfortunately Pikachu was the only Pokémon who had voice acting, but gamers and industry journalists were certain Pokémon Gold and Silver would feature more of this. Of course we all know that, 11 years later, the voice acting is nowhere to be seen and it still remains at the top of fans' wish lists, but at least we can take comfort in knowing that we had a brief and addicting taste of it in Pokémon Yellow.

Another popular addition to Pokémon Yellow was the appearance of Jesse, James, and Meowth of Team Rocket in the game. Your character would have several battles with them, along with Koffing, Ekans, and their evolved forms for another close link with the anime series. Of course, much like the anime, they were always woefully underpowered compared to your team making it an easy fight. This was also the first ever Tag Battle, where you would fight two trainers at once. The engine was still limited to only one-on-one Pokémon battles, but this concept of fighting two trainers at the same time would eventually give way to the tag battles you would encounter in Pokémon Ruby, Sapphire, and Emerald.

Perhaps my personal favorite thing about Pokémon Yellow was the special bonus you could get if you hooked the game up to Pokémon Stadium for the Nintendo 64. If you won the R-2 Prime Cup Master Ball Division using your Pikachu from Pokémon Yellow as one of your three Pokémon, it would learn Surf. Return it to Pokémon Yellow and in Fuchsia City, you could play a surfing mini-game with Pikachu that is easily the best mini-game in the history of Pokémon. In this game, your goal is to score as many points by having Pikachu do tricks on his surfboard until his Hit Points run out.

Finally, much like Pokémon Red and Blue, you would have to trade with friends to complete your Pokédex. Pokémon Yellow had the least amount of catchable Pokémon in the actual game, so you would have to trade with both Blue and Red to complete the Pokédex. However, this disadvantage was made up by the ability to get all three Kanto starters and several wild versions of Pokémon you could only get in Red and Blue via trades with CPU trainers – sure, there wasn't much of a call for a wild Lickitung, but at least the option was finally there with Pokémon Yellow.

LEGACY

Pokémon Yellow still remains the fastest-selling handheld game of all time, with the Guinness Book of World Records showing it reaching over one million copies sold in less than two weeks. Although it came close, not even Pokémon Platinum accomplished that. Overall it is the sixth-best-selling Game Boy title ever. It is also the 21st-best-selling game of all time, regardless of console, but when coupled with Pokémon Red, Blue, and Green, the total number of Generation One games sold is over 29 million, making it the number one best-selling game of all time – the next highest is Wii Play at 26.71 million. That's pretty impressive! Pokémon Yellow also would give way to the "Point Five" remakes that come with each generation such as Crystal, Emerald, and Platinum.

The innovations and ahead-of-its-time ideas are still being felt 11 years later as things done in that tiny Game Boy cart with black-and-white four-bit graphics are just now coming around to being commonplace. Truly, Pokémon Yellow deserves to be remembered as one of the best and most influential Pokémon games of all time. If you haven't played it, you're missing out on a key piece of Pokémon history.

BECKETT'S ULTIMATE GUIDE TO

Pikachu gets the spotlight this month

By Alex Lucard

In the three years I've been doing this column, I've actively avoided covering Pikachu because I think it's more fun to look at the lesser-known Pokémon. But, since this is the

"all-Pikachu" issue,

it only makes sense to finally give Pikachu his day in the sun. Let's take a look at the history of the most recognizable Pokémon in the franchise.

PIKACHU!

The face of the Pokémon franchise

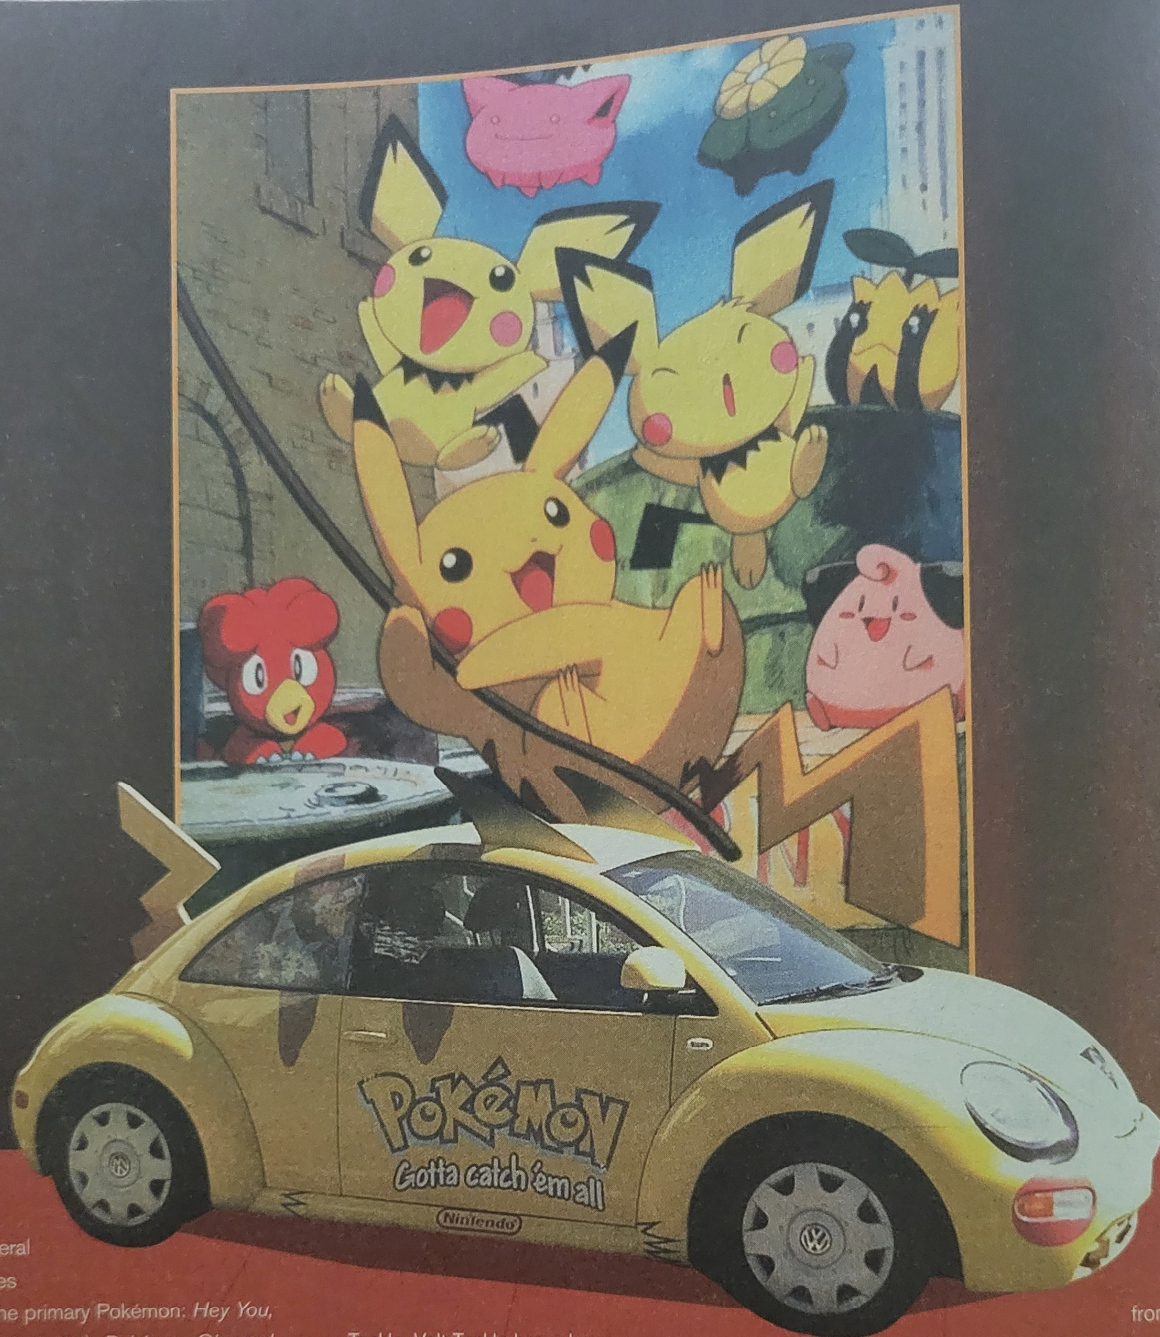

You may be surprised to learn that Pikachu was not the original choice to be the face of Pokémon; Clefairy was actually chosen to be the toytastic standard bearer of the franchise. Clefairy even got a couple of years as the main Pokémon in the Pokémon Pocket Monsters manga. This manga was both the longest-running Pokémon manga of all time, as well as the second-longest-running manga series in CoroCoro (a Japanese magazine) history. The anime series decided to go a different route, by appealing to a much younger and family-friendly audience, and due to Clefairy's well-known deviant behavior in the magazine, Pikachu was substituted as the main Pokémon. Due to the anime's unexpected explosion in popularity and Pikachu becoming instantly recognizable even to people who weren't that familiar with Pokémon, Pikachu ended up edging out Clefairy as the Pokémon mascot, much the same way Sonic the Hedgehog replaced Alex Kidd for Sega. Think how different life would be if Pikachu hadn't received his big push; would Pokémon be as popular as it is today, or would we be talking about Pokémon Pink rather than Pokémon Yellow or discussing Clefairy and Cleffa on Super Smash Bros. forums? Somehow, I doubt it. Clefairy might be one of my favorite Pokémon, but it just lacks the "it" factor Pikachu has.

Gaming goodness

Pikachu has had multiple video games dedicated solely to him. Pokémon Yellow stars Pikachu as the only starter Pokémon and follows the anime closer than the earlier, first-generation Pokémon games. There were two different Pokémon Pikachu systems, which acted as the forerunner for the Pokéwalker, a big part of the HeartGold & SoulSilver remakes. Pikachu has even had several console games where he is the primary Pokémon: Hey You, Pikachu! (Nintendo 64), Pokémon Channel (GameCube), and PokéPark Wii: Pikachu's Great Adventure (Nintendo Wii). Pikachu has also had quite a few variants in the core RPG, each containing a special move it couldn't otherwise learn. The most common of these is Surfing Pikachu, which gives Pikachu access to one of the most powerful Water-type moves in the game, as well as a strong attack against his usual Achilles' heel in Ground-type Pokémon. Surfing Pikachu even showed up as a Black Star promo card, which is best known for accidentally referring to a group of Pikachu as "Pikachus," which is a grammatical mistake akin to the all too common "Pokémans."

Since the onset of Generation III, Pikachu and its evolutionary family have had their own signature move that only they can learn in Volt Tackle. Volt Tackle has a base attack of 120, a 100% accuracy rating, is a physical attack, and causes Pikachu to take one third of the damage he gives out as recoil damage. In Generation III, the only way to learn this move is to give a female Pikachu or Raichu a Light Ball and then breed it; the corresponding Pichu would then know Volt Tackle. This method also works in Generation IV, but there are two other ways to learn the move. If you can beat Pokémon Battle Revolution for the Nintendo Wii, you can earn a Volt Tackle Pikachu for your Generation IV RPGs. The other way is to be lucky enough to catch one in the Yellow Forest, which is a downloadable Pokéwalker course. A Volt Tackle Pikachu is rare, but nowhere as rare as the Surfing or Flying Pikachu you can also find there. The interesting thing is that the name of the move come from another

Game Freak title known as Pulseman, whose main attack was a Volt Tackle. This in turn was an homage to Tekkaman, who recently appeared in Tatsunoko vs. Capcom for the Nintendo Wii, as the Volt Tackle is his signature attack as well.

Anime adventures

Of course, the most famous Pikachu of them all is the one that fights side by side with Ash Ketchum in the long-running Pokémon anime series. Pikachu is not only Ash's first Pokémon, but the only one Ash has kept by his side through all his travels. You would think Pikachu would have maxed his level out by now, but he keeps on battling. Pikachu's voice actress is Ikue Ohtani, who has also played Tron Bonne in the Mega Man Legends series, Dot Warner in the Japanese version of Animaniacs, and Zatch Bell in well... Zatch Bell! No matter what, she'll always be Pikachu to her fans.

It might surprise younger readers to know that Ash and Pikachu weren't always the best of friends. In fact, when they started out, Ash and Pikachu made Ash's relationship with Charizard look downright chummy. Ash was supposed to pick between Charmander, Bulbasaur, and Squirtle, like all trainers from Pallet Town, but Ash, being a clueless dunder-head in his early days as a Pokémon trainer, overslept. By the time he woke up, all the normal starter Pokémon were taken by other kids. Out of pity, Professor Oak gave Ash a very grumpy Pikachu that neither liked nor respected Ash. After several outings that led to Ash being embarrassed, injured, and humiliated, he finally earned Pikachu's respect after throwing himself in front of a clutch of attacking Spearow, taking the brunt of the damage. From that moment on, Pikachu and Ash have been inseparable, even if Pikachu still refuses to go inside his Pokéball.

Iconic status

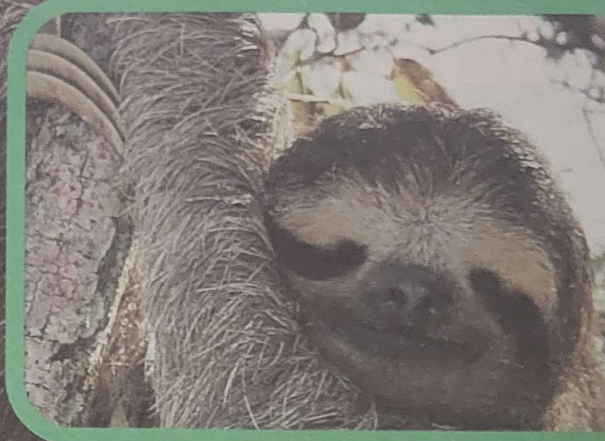

So there we go, a brief look into the decade and a half of Pikachu's existence. During this time, Pikachu has had special-edition Volkswagen Beetles designed after it, received its own Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade balloon, was the runner up for Person of the Year in 1999 by Time Magazine (losing to the head of Amazon.com, Jeff Bezos), and even has a ligand – a signal-triggering molecule – named after it (Pikachurin) by biochemists. Topeka, Kansas even renamed itself Topikachu for a month in 1998 – all that from one little electric lagoon! Truly, Pikachu has earned its place with Bugs Bunny and Mickey Mouse as one of the most famous anthropomorphic fictional animals of all time, as well as his spot as the most famous and popular Pokémon in the franchise.

THE REAL-LIFE SLAKOTH

NOT ONE OF THE SEVEN DEADLY SINS

By Alexander Lucard

I've actually never used a Slakoth or any of its evolutions on any of my Pokémon teams. The Pokémon Ability Truant just seemed like such a horrible handicap that I've always stuck with my preferred Normal-type Pokémon like Clefable and Snorlax. However, this Pokémon Ability is quite fitting for the real-life creature Slakoth is based off of – the sloth. Looking at Slakoth, it has the limbs of the two-toed sloth and the face of a three-toed sloth. Oddly enough, both types of sloths are only vaguely related to each other and are two mammals that happened to come from different evolutionary trees and evolve into species that are quite similar to each other (except to biologists). This month, we'll take a look at sloths in general and see how they inspired this Hoenn Pokémon.

GENERAL PHYSIOLOGY

There are six species of sloth, all of which are part of the order Pilosa, but the families Megalonychidae and Bradypodidae are the two- and three-toed sloth groups, respectively. The sloth has two taxonomical names, Folivora and Phyllophaga – the former is Latin and the latter is Greek, but both mean “leaf-eaters,” which is exactly what sloths do, all day, every day. A sloth's diet is composed primarily of buds, stems, shoots, and leaves, primarily from cecropia trees.

Cecropia trees are a family of two dozen trees that grow primarily in the rain-forest. They are easily recognized by their large, circular, palmate (“consisting of leaflets or lobes radiating from the base of the leaf,” according to Wikipedia) leaves, which divide into seven to 11 lobes. Most animals will not eat from cecropia trees because they're known as Myrmecophyte, or “ant plants.” These trees have a symbiotic relationship with a colony or colonies of ants which, in turn, protect the plants. As well, cecropia leaves have little to no nutritional value to them, nor are they easy to digest, so one has to wonder why sloths took to these plants considering there are so many negatives against eating any part of them.

Still, sloths have evolved into a life form that can easily handle these issues. They have very large multi-chambered stomachs that have slow-acting specialized bacteria that help break the leaves down. You might be surprised to learn that it can take up to a month to digest the leaves in a sloth's stomach. Sloths have very large stomachs – two thirds of a sloth's body weight is its stomach and the contents therein. Because the leaves provide so much bulk and so little energy, sloths survive by being one of the coldest warm-blooded animals on earth with a body temperature of 86 to 93 degrees Fahrenheit, compared to our own 98.6 degrees. Sloths also have a metabolic rate that is half that of other mammals their own size, which means they use far less energy. This also accounts for the speed that gives them their common name.

Although sloths only move when they have to (and, even then, at a maximum speed of only 1.2 miles per hour), their massive hook-like claws are pretty much all they need. Their claws are extremely powerful and can even deter jaguars and eagles from choosing them as prey. Even poachers tend to find sloths poor prey. Even after one is shot and killed, the strength and angle of a sloth's claws will keep the body hanging in the trees long after it's dead. A sloth's claws also help it to be a surprisingly good swimmer (yet poor Slakoth can't learn Surf...). The sloth even uses its claws when it sleeps. It's nocturnal and it sleeps over 10 hours a day, so during daylight hours, one will place its head between its arms and then draw its legs together closely. The claws of the sloth hold it in place, as well as keep it from falling to the ground, and it can rest comfortably knowing that anything that sees it will assume it's part of the tree rather than a live and edible animal.

TWO TOES VS. THREE TOES

The two-toed sloth species are directly related to the prehistoric gigantic ground sloths of which you can often see a skeleton of in your local museum. These sloths predominantly lived in North America until the eventual ice age killed them off millions of years ago. Many of these now-extinct sloths weighed over five tons, grew to over six meters in length, and could reach 17 feet high – to put it in perspective, these sloths were larger than a full-grown male elephant! Depending on the type of ground sloth it was, it could have up to four or five fingers, with claws over a foot long! It's unknown as to how or why the prehistoric sloths converted into a tree-dwelling lifestyle, but we do know the smallest of the ground sloth species were able to climb even back then. Odder still is that scientists are still unsure where the three-toed sloth species came from, since they're not related to either prehistoric sloths or the current two-toed ones.

Three-toed sloths have a slightly green coloration and their fur falls in such a way that when they are not moving, predators and human beings may mistake them for a clump of leaves on a tree. As well, the environment has far more control over their body temperature than the two-toed sloths and they're almost like a reptile instead of a mammal in this respect. A three-toed sloth's body heat goes down as the temperature does, which means they can only live in hot and humid locations. In fact the only publicly displayed three-toed sloth in the world is in Dallas, Texas at the Dallas World Aquarium and Zoo.

Other differences between the two are that two-toed sloths climb down trees head first, while three-toed sloths descend bottom first. Two-toed sloths also have longer snouts and hair than three-toed species, but they lack the tail of the three-toed versions. Three-toed sloths also has extra vertebrae in its neck – this allows them to turn their heads 270 degrees and nearly in all directions. Factor in that the three-toed sloth also has a view from above, thanks to its spending its whole life in the trees, and you have an animal that can almost never be caught off guard – even if it can't win a race.

CONCLUSION

As very few sloths can survive outside of tropical rainforest conditions, the future of the two- and three-toed sloth species is very bleak indeed. While only one of the six surviving species of sloths is actively considered endangered, the rate at which the South American rainforest is being depleted will eventually prove a threat to all of them. As the rainforest is destroyed, not only will the sloth go the way of its prehistoric brethren, but so will 80 percent of the biodiversity on the planet. It's up to all of us to ensure the rainforest is used wisely rather than haphazardly, otherwise the only sloths left will be the Slakoth in your Pokémon games.

One last batch of pure gold

By Michael Lucas

Welcome back, trainers! The HeartGold and SoulSilver Base Set is chock full of cards any player would love to include in his or her deck. I've saved a few good ones for this last column on the set: they include one of the fastest energy boosters in the game, one of the most explosive Pokémon out there, and a Pokémon Power form of one of the strongest old-school trainers in the game! Let's take a look!

Ampharos (#14/123): Supercharged!

In order to go through the trouble of playing a Stage 2 Pokémon, it has to have an amazing attack or power. Acceleration Bolt definitely fits the bill – the 30 damage is nominal, compared to getting to attach two Basic Energy cards straight out of the deck, any way you like! Note that they're not limited to Lightning Energy – this could power up benched copies of Lugia Legend for devastating attacks! Thunder is a useful finisher if you have to resort to using Ampharos to knock out a Pokémon instead of charging the bench and can be done with one use of Acceleration Bolt. If your opponent isn't able to immediately deal with Ampharos, then in about two or three turns, they'll be behind so far there will be no chance of coming back. If you like electric Pokémon at all, or just need a way to get that energy out faster, this is the Pokémon for you!

Exeggutor (#18/123): Eggs-plosive and eggs-traordinary!

High-risk, high-reward moves have always had a part in Pokémon – “Gambler” trainers in the video game that used one-hit KO attacks with low accuracy and the Gambler card from the Fossil expansion that shuffled your hand into your deck and let you draw either one or eight cards on a coin flip. Exeggutor is definitely a gambler's card – Energy Absorption picks up two discarded energy. (Those of you who know me know that I'm a big fan of the first Pokémon ever to make great use of the Energy Absorption attack!) Big Eggsplosion can either take out the strongest of Pokémon or throw up the big “goose egg” – zero damage – depending upon how the coin falls. At an average of 20 damage per Energy card, an Exeggutor that can't be knocked out can tear through a team in short order. I'd like to point out that Energy Absorption can pull back Double Colorless Energy, and Big Eggsplosion counts total energy, not energy cards, which can lead to huge damage by turn three or four! If you've always been a lucky player or can consistently set up Exeggutor early, he's worth building a deck around!

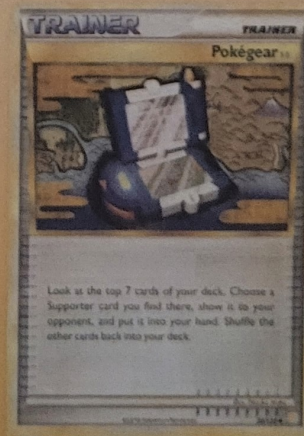

Blissey Prime (#106/123): The TCG's Prime Healer

Pokémon Prime have quite a bit expected of them – you can bet your bottom dollar that there will be Pokémon Powers and attacks that specifically target them in the future to offset them being so strong. Blissey Prime definitely plays the supporter role – evolving your Chansey into Blissey Prime triggers the Blissful Nurse power, which is essentially the Pokémon Center Trainer card in the form of a Poke-Power. Strength is nothing to write home about – 60 damage for three energy isn't much, even with a Double Colorless thrown into the mix. Blissey is best used to heal some other Pokémon that has additional ways of getting energy onto it – either through other Pokémon Powers or attack effects (Acceleration Bolt comes to mind). If you need a heavy source of healing, Blissey Prime is worth a shot.

Trainer Corner: Pokégear 3.0 (#96/123)

Pokégear 3.0 is a nice one-for-one deck-thinning card – a non-supporter card that can fetch a supporter card can get you toward those power cards quicker, and those who know the math behind deckbuilding know every card taken out of the deck increases your odds of drawing another needed card ever so slightly. That can be the difference between getting that last Pokémon you need or coming up one turn short – if you've got an open slot or two left in your deck, this might be just the card you're looking for.

THROUGHOUT THE

POKEMON TCG

SOME OF PIKACHU'S BEST, MOST VALUABLE, AND MOST FAMOUS CARDS

By Michael Lucas

Pikachu has been the face of the Pokémon franchise for what seems like forever. Ever since the very first episode of the animated series, he's been a mainstay and most likely always will be. He's also had a long trek through the Pokémon Trading Card Game as well – counting promotional and foreign releases, there have been over 60 different Pikachu cards released! While I won't be able to go over all of them in this article, I'm going to pick out a few I feel are worth a mention for one reason or another. Let's take a look!

First Misprint: Base Set (#58/102)

Players of all trading card games know that misprints can be rather valuable. The Base Set Pikachu was printed two different ways – once with yellow cheeks, and then again with red cheeks. While he has red cheeks in the series, the yellow-cheeked one was considered the “correct” printing, making the red-cheeked one sought after for a while. (The value has since dropped significantly; I see one on eBay for about $6 as of the time this article was submitted.) As far as playability...he left a lot to be desired. With Base Set Hitmonchan's Jab being able to take him out in one shot, and the Haymaker deck using Hitmonchan being very popular at the time, it wasn't yet Pikachu's time to shine in the TCG.

Toughest Pikachu: Stormfront (#70/100)

It's an odd coincidence that they chose to slot this card in the 70th position, since he's the first Pikachu with 70 HP. In addition, he has one of the better one-turn protection abilities in Speed Bolt – if you evolved him from Pichu and attacked that turn, you scored 40 damage and one turn's worth of invincibility – enough to get Raichu into play safely and probably get a knockout in doing so. 70 HP used to be the standard for big basic Pokémon – Mewtwo, Hitmonchan, Scyther, and Electabuzz quickly come to mind. With Stage 2s hitting 150 HP or more now, Pikachu got a much-needed boost here.

Strongest Pikachu: Pokémon Rumble promo (#7/16)

While the Stormfront Pikachu was able to take the most damage, the recently released Rumble version is able to dish out the most damage with the least kickback. 60 HP is more than fair for Pikachu, and Volt Tackle doing 60 damage for one Lightning and one Double Colorless Energy, with only 10 damage kickback, is a viable turn-two play if you aren't able to evolve him right away. You can see that the creators considered that rather powerful as well, as they slapped the x2 Fighting Weakness on him, rather than the +10 or +20 other lower-evolution Pokémon tend to have now.

Most Valuable: Happy Birthday Pikachu (Japanese version)

Most early players remember the initial American release of this card; it was Wizards of the Coast's 24th promo. It was somewhat high-valued over here, but had nothing on the Japanese version. The rumor was that the card had a very short print run and was even priced higher than 1st Edition Base Set Charizard for a time! Players eventually figured out the card wasn't as rare as first thought, and the price normalized somewhat; it's still up there, at about $70 at the moment.

One other note – upon its U.S. release, Birthday Pikachu became one of only two banned cards in Unlimited Format, because any player could just say it was his or her birthday, whether or not it was, to get the coin flip for a potential 50 damage bonus.

I hope this gave you a few quick insights as to what Pikachu fans have seen throughout their involvement in the TCG. Until next time, play hard and play fair!

DECK REVIEW

Long Live TRAINERMON

30 TRAINER DECKS ARE BACK WITH "LADY GAGA"

By Michael Lucas

Welcome, trainers, to my new Pokémon TCG deck reviews! By popular demand, our Pokémon coverage is expanding, and I'll be here every issue to cover the new and noteworthy decks that you should expect to go up against at your high-level Pokémon tournaments. Whether you're a casual player or the top dog at your league, there should be something here for everyone. Those of you who follow my Pokémon articles know I've longed for the old days of Pokémon, where the trainer cards went flying and it was the training, more than the Pokémon themselves, that determined the victor. Those days are back in full force!

The first deck I'll be looking at is an extremely versatile build featuring Luxray GL LV.X and Garchomp C LV.X that many players have taken to calling "Lady GaGa." With both of those Pokémon lines, GaGa fans can enjoy the best of both worlds! Let's take a look at the deck list!

16x Pokémon

- 2x Luxray GL Lv. 48
- 2x Luxray GL LV.X
- 1x Garchomp C Lv. 62
- 1x Garchomp C LV.X
- 2x Crobat G Lv. 44

- 1x Toxicroak G Lv. 45
- 1x Bronzong G Lv. 58
- 1x Lucario GL Lv. 32
- 2x Uxie Lv. 55
- 1x Uxie LV.X
- 1x Azelf Lv. 55
- 1x Ambipom G Lv. 40

30x Trainers

- 4x Cyrus's Conspiracy
- 4x Poké Turn
- 4x Power Spray
- 3x Energy Gain
- 3x SP Radar
- 3x Roseanne's Research
- 3x Bebe's Search
- 2x Aaron's Collection
- 1x Premier Ball
- 1x Luxury Ball
- 1x Expert Belt
- 1x VS Seeker

14x Energy

- 4x Call Energy
- 4x Double Colorless Energy
- 3x Lightning Energy
- 2x Psychic Energy
- 1x Warp Energy

Pokémon: Luxray GL and his LV.X are the first half of the deck's core. Bite is fair at a DCE for 30, and Trash Bolt has a manageable energy discard for 70 damage. LV.X shines as the deck's big source of disruption, with Bright Look being the deck's Gust of Wind. Flash Impact can cost only a single Lightning with the Energy Gain trainer, and 60 damage for one energy is well worth taking 30 to one of your own Pokémon.

Garchomp's Bite and Earthquake can dish out a fair bit of damage, although Earthquake does spread damage to your bench.

Garchomp C LV.X is amazing, healing all your Pokémon SP, picking off benched Pokémon 80 damage at a time with Dragon Rush if you discard a Double Colorless Energy.

Crobat is a recyclable source of 10 damage via his power, and Toxic Fang takes on 20 poison damage per turn. That adds up quickly. Toxicroak is a great Pokémon to hit with your 30 damage from Luxray GL LV.X, as you have a 50/50 shot of picking him back up and clearing that damage off the field next turn. Bronzong G lets you shuffle around your energy between SPs via Galactic Switch at the penalty of 20 damage. Lucario GL is solely here to add to weaknesses where the opponent may not be playing Pokémon with the full double weakness.

Uxie fills your hand back up with Set Up, and Psychic Restore lets him duck out of harm's way if needed. His LV.X form essentially gives you an extra draw per turn with a choice between two cards with Trade Off, and in a pinch he can hit for 60 with a DCE with Zen Blade. Azelf gets you a Pokémon out of your prizes that you may desperately need with his Time Walk power – this is so critical that many decks are including a tech copy of him. Ambipom G can do 60 damage to a Pokémon without an energy or disrupt your opponent with Tail Code to move his energy where he doesn't want it.

Trainers: This deck has amazing consistency in whatever it's looking to do, thanks to its massive trainer lineup. Cyrus's Conspiracy gives you almost everything you'd want to search for: a Galactic's Invention trainer, an energy, and another supporter for next turn. It sets up the SP deck quite well and allows easy access to its other combo pieces. Poké Turn does so many things: It picks up a Pokémon that might have Flash Impact damage on it, it lets you do extra damage with Crobat G if you're close to a knockout, a re-use of Gust of Wind with Luxray GL LV.X, a full heal with Garchomp C LV.X...the possibilities are nearly endless in how this one card can change the game!

Power Spray lets you pull off negations of your opponent's Pokémon Powers, as long as you have three or more Pokémon SP in play.

Energy Gain lets

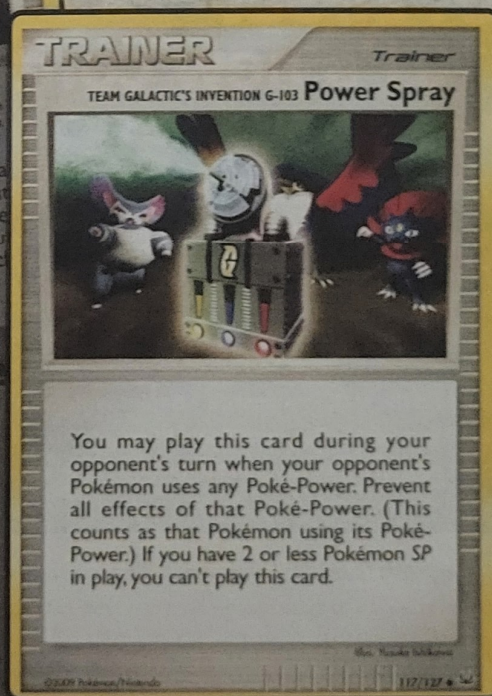

porter you've already used. Bebe's Search is basically SP Radar, except it's a supporter and you can get any Pokémon instead of just your SPs. Aaron's Collection gets back either your energy or your Pokémon SPs, using the discard pile as a resource. Premier Ball guarantees you a LV.X, getting Luxray, Garchomp, or Uxie up and running. Luxury Ball gets you any Pokémon – except for those LV.Xs – without any other cost except only being able to use one copy. Finally, Expert Belt weighs your willingness to take a risk for a huge payoff; the extra 20 damage it grants can be the difference between taking that last prize or not, but if the Pokémon it's attached to is knocked out, they take an extra prize. Thankfully you can get Expert Belt off the field using your Poké Turn cards, in case it becomes a liability.

Energy: The deck doesn't need many. It maxes out on Double Colorless Energy, as it very well should; so many cards in the deck use it well. Call Energy can be used to forego an attack in favor of searching for extra Pokémon for your bench. Warp Energy functions as the deck's copy of Switch when needed. Normally I would be worried about the low count of Psychic and Lightning energy, but with Energy Gain making most Pokémon SP's attacks cost one energy, and multiple ways to search or retrieve the basic energy the deck plays, you don't need any more.

your Pokémon SP attack for one colorless energy less – Flash Impact only costs one Lightning, Crobat G's Toxic Fang only costs one Psychic, and Garchomp C LV.X only requires a Double Colorless. SP Radar lets you trade a dead card for a needed Pokémon SP without taking up your supporter slot. Roseanne's Research gives you either Pokémon or energy, and that all-around usefulness lets it take two of the deck's precious supporter spots.

Vs. Seeker trades off one-for-one for a sup-

ADVANCED PETS AND NEW WORLDS

Our Q&A about Wizard101's new content

By Stephanie Morrow

Fans of Wizard101 have already started to enjoy their pets in the new Advanced Pet System, introduced last month. But that's not all KingsIsle Entertainment has in store! An entirely new realm, Celestia, awaits wizards later this year, and we were able to take some time with the staff at KingsIsle – Senior Writer Jason Durall and Senior Designer Justin Wingard – to talk about all that's new (or going to be new) in this great game!

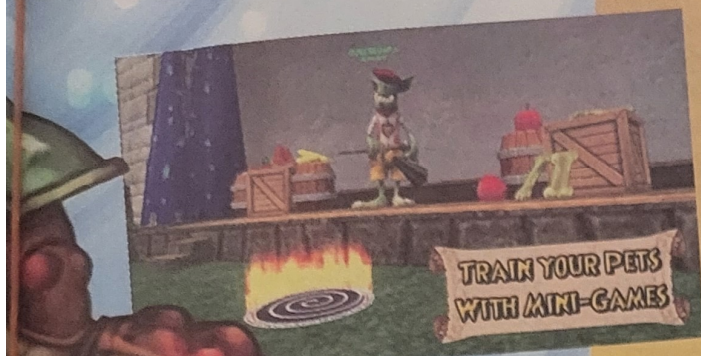

Beckett: Could you maybe explain the basics of the new pets and Celestia to those readers who may have not heard the announcement?

Jason Durall: Absolutely! It makes the most sense to tackle these separately as they each represent significant expansions in the way of systems and content for Wizard101. We're very excited about both of these, as they've been long in the planning and production stages. Now we're in that "labor pains are starting, get to the hospital now!" phase of the birthing process.

Justin Wingard: Yeah, it's definitely an exciting time around the offices at KingsIsle. Advanced Pets represents a very deep system and new leveling opportunity, so it has taken us a while to get it ready for players. This is really the most fun stage of the development process because we're really starting to see people around the office enjoy a system that had only existed in design docs and spreadsheets for a long time. In today's game worlds, most players view pets as fun "side-kicks" that add some basic stats and spells to the player. With the new system, players will be able to level their pets from an egg to a creature of great power.

One really cool part about the Advanced Pets system is that pets will begin to take on new roles. During standard game play, pets will now offer a lot more power to their owners. They will be able to cast spells in duels and have up to four powers that can impact a player's wizard. We have also launched a large racing game, and, as you level up, your pet they will gain skills and boosts to enhance performance. Players will be able to train their pets through a number of games and other activities. One of the really cool aspects of the new pet system is the ability to hatch a new pet from two other pets. Players can bring two of their own pets to the Hatchery or find another wizard to bring one of his or her pets. The new pet will be a genetic combination of the originals with an almost limitless number of possible power combinations.

Jason: Switching gears to talk about Celestia, it is indeed the next of several new worlds for Wizard101. Celestia is an ancient and lost world of the Spiral, built around some unique types of magic that will expand the schools available to players and raise the level cap to 60. Many centuries ago, the folk of Celestia developed astrologic schools of magic, and they met with a terrible calamity. The player will be drawn into the world of Celestia and must uncover the secrets that the sunken world holds.

It also marks the beginning of a major new story arc. Grizzleheim exists as a "side" world, where it doesn't connect to the major Malistaire plot, but Celestia continues a new story for Grandmasters (you must be level 50 to access this new world) with a big new threat to the worlds of the Spiral, the emergence of new worlds, and the rediscovery of secrets long buried and forgotten. Players will discover parts of the history of the Spiral they were previously unaware of...things their professors had hoped they'd never learn.

Beckett: Can you give readers a hint on what these secondary schools of magic may be that were hinted at in the press release? How will they work?

Justin: At this time, we can't really get into the details of how the new schools will work, but we can guarantee that they will be one of the most exciting things for new players to discover when venturing into Celestia. Not only will they be powerful in their own right but they will give players the ability to utilize old spells in ways they never thought possible.

ADVANCED PETS

Beckett: The new pet system sounds absolutely amazing, what was the inspiration behind the decision to allow players to interact with their pets on such an advanced level?

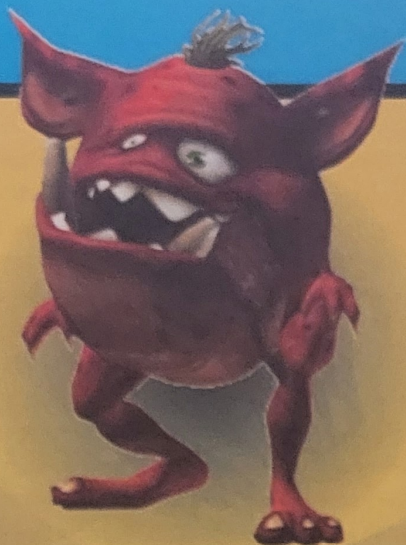

Justin: We wanted to add another system to Wizard101 that had a lot of depth that was parallel to the main storyline of the game. Our first expansion of this sort was the Castles & Lands system and it has been a huge hit with our community. The amount of creativity that our players put into decorating their homes is staggering. The current pet system we have been using has always been very popular with players so it really became a no-brainer for us to add some more depth to it. Players will still have the exact same pets as before, but now they'll gain the ability to train them, hatch them, and even run the Pet Derby using them. Are you a Storm school player who really wants to build up your accuracy? With careful hatching and some smart choices you can eventually train a pet that will give you a large bonus to this. Are you a Life school player and wish you had a little bit more firepower at your disposal? With some of the more rare pets you'll get access to high-level spells that you've never seen before. The Advanced Pets system just has a tremendous amount of depth to it and the development team here really can't wait for players to jump into it.

Beckett: Can you give readers some examples of how pets will gain abilities?

Justin: Each pet will have varying aptitudes for 10 talents that help wizards during the main quest and 10 powers that help the pets in the racing system. As pets age, they'll eventually see four of each talent/power manifest. When a player hatches new pets, they'll have new combinations of these attributes. One fun twist is that hidden recessive traits will follow pets, so a player may see a completely unexpected trait show up many generations down the line.

We can't reveal too much more because that would ruin the fun of discovering the combinations. We can at least say that a lot of new pets are going into the game with the Advanced Pets system. Some will be easy and inexpensive to get off of vendors. Some of the more rare ones you will find off of bosses, the arena vendors, and eventually maybe even through crafting recipes. Personally, I love the rat magician pets that are going into the game. You can get the regular one off the creatures in Marleybone, but the rare one is more challenging to find.

Beckett: How will this new pet system appeal to both casual and hardcore players alike?

Justin: For the casual players the system will be great because all you have to do is take your pet to the Pet Pavilion to train and he'll/she'll gain new powers that benefit you in the journey around the Spiral. It's very simple on the surface.

For the more hardcore audience there's a tremendous amount of depth when you get into the Hatching system because it allows you to, with a little bit of time and work, tailor your pet to the specific needs of your class. There are literally thousands of permutations of talents and spells a pet can gain so it's going to be a really interesting discovery process for players to figure out which the best ones are and how to obtain them. For example, some of the more powerful talents in the game give your pet a chance to interrupt combat and cast a spell of his/her own. These interrupts are everything from damage spells, to blades, to trap cards. The potential is out there to hatch some extremely powerful pets.

CELESTIA

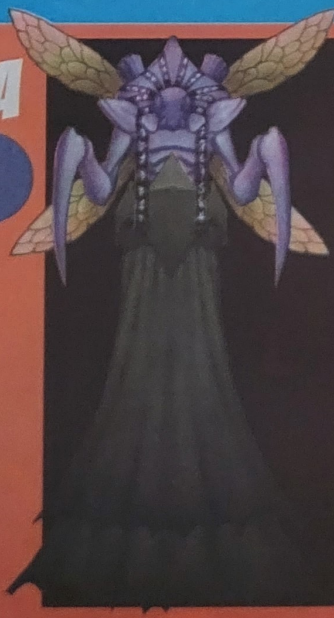

Beckett: With so many wonderful ideas out there, how was it decided that Atlantis would be the inspiration for Celestia?

Jason: Long before launch, before Dragonspyre was built and the Malistaire story arc was resolved, there was a list of future worlds to add to the Spiral. Some of them were admittedly on the humorous side, and some are more serious. Grizzleheim was the first of those worlds to be built, and we had thought about going lighter for the next story arc. Upon reflection, we realized that as players will be coming off the Malistaire story arc, we needed to make sure that the next world was both serious but not so grim as the shattered, ghost-haunted world of Dragonspyre.

Celestia came as a combination of a few factors: the desire to add new schools of magic, the desire for a world based on those schools, and the desire for an underwater kingdom. We liked the strange twist of a world that worshipped the stars being at the bottom of the ocean, and it begins the new big story arc with an exotic new location.

Beckett: Are there going to be more housing

ON THE TRAIL TO CELESTIA HOW THE STORY BEGINS

After attaining the rank of Grand Master and defeating Malistaire, you are summoned to Ravenwood by Halston Balestrom, who explains that he has received a cryptic message on a strange device, the Resonating Omni Audio-Graph.

Balestrom asks for help decoding the message and sends you to Krokotopia to find an ancient artifact that will help in the translation. Upon arrival, you discover that the item you need has been stolen, broken apart, and scattered throughout the Spiral by a group of mysterious villains.

It's up to you to travel across the options added with this latest expansion?

Justin: For this expansion, the big new addition will be the ability to leave your pets in your house. It will be pretty impressive to see the houses of players who have collected a large number of pets. We have some things planned for future expansions, but right now we can't really go into the details of that.

Beckett: When designing a new expansion, what is one of the more difficult tasks members of your team are presented with?

Justin: Yeah, that's a really tough question. At a high level, everything we put our name on has to remain true to our mission of developing great, high-quality family entertainment. Certainly, one of the more challenging aspects is learning to let go of certain design elements when they're simply not as fun as you had imagined. Game design is best when it's an ongoing iterative process, and unfortunately that means you're sometimes faced with the tough situation of needing to throw out stuff that you may have worked on for weeks. You always have to bear in mind that the end objective is to make a fun and rewarding gameplay experience, and thus far we've been successful at that.

Jason: The experience of working on a game is very different from playing it, and we need to always make sure that we're seeing things from the player's point of view. What may be fresh to us might be tired to players, and vice versa. Often the hardest part is deciding what not to include, and figuring out how to keep the plan simple and focused. With a team of this size and so many creative people here who feel so strongly about Wizard101, it's a challenge making sure everyone is heard, and sometimes choosing between one good idea and another equally good one.

Beckett: Anything else you'd like to share with our readers in closing?

Justin: The Advanced Pets system is huge addition to Wizard101 and we're really excited about it. With Celestia and other content on the horizon it's a great time to be a Wizard adventuring in the Spiral. Thanks so much for playing the game and we promise that even more great things are coming in the future.

Jason: We're extremely excited to be jumping into a new grand story arc that pushes the narrative forward, increases the level cap, and adds new systems that increase what players do in Wizard101 when they're not running around trying to save the Spiral. We took a big risk by structuring our content around a specific narrative with a beginning, middle, and an end that took players through the first five worlds. It's encouraging to see the fans (and the marketplace) letting us know that it was the right idea, so we're happy to continue with that tradition and deliver exciting story and gameplay for the whole family to enjoy!

Spiral and defeat a cadre of villains to get the pieces Balestrom requires. Gradually, you learn more about these mysterious enemies, discovering that they are the Shadow Weavers, a secret order of Wizards with sinister plans.

Upon successfully decoding Balestrom's mysterious message, you learn that it originates from a long-lost Marleybonian survey team from the Spiral Geographic Society, a league of explorers who set out long ago to find the lost world of Celestia. According to the message, the explorers believe they have stumbled upon an important discovery, but they are trapped and in great danger!

With this new information, Balestrom concludes that the Shadow Weavers are after the ancient Spiral Key to Celestia, held in the Spiral Geographic Society archives. He asks you to travel to the Society headquarters and retrieve the Spiral Key. However, upon arrival in Marleybone, you discover that this simple errand will become a daunting trial, requiring you to overcome a squadron of Shadow Weavers and other powerful forces eager to keep Celestia lost and its secrets unknown.

After defeating the final enemy, you find a blackened, broken Spiral Key...now you must discover whether it is shattered forever, or if it can be remade to function again!

STARLIGHT ROAD

By Michael Lucas

THE MOST GAME-BREAKING TRAP SINCE CRUSH CARD VIRUS!

Welcome back, duelists! It's not often I get the chance to do a review of a single card – most of my Yu-Gi-Oh! articles either cover Shonen Jump Championship results, new decks that will see competitive play in the future, or the semi-annual Forbidden and Limited list updates. But I had to take the time out to talk about Starlight Road, as its mere existence – even if you never use it – will change how you play Yu-Gi-Oh! forever! What makes this card so good that I'd compare it to the field and hand-clearing abilities of Crush Card Virus? Let's take a look!

Starlight Road has two insanely powerful effects combined in one card. You not only get to negate an opponent's "power card" (any card your opponent plays that would destroy two or more of your resources), but you can special summon a Stardust Dragon for free afterwards! Every deck, almost by default, includes three power cards: Heavy Storm, Torrential Tribute, and Mirror Force. Other decks have additional power cards that commonly see play: Lightsworns still have two copies of Judgment Dragon, Gladiator Beasts have Gyzarus, Blackwings play three copies of Icarus Attack, Monarchs may use Mobius, and most side decks will contain Lightning Vortex. After the negation, a free Stardust Dragon is Special Summoned; one thing to keep in mind here is that the Stardust brought out by Starlight Road is not considered to be Synchro Summoned properly. This means that if it uses its negation effect and tributes itself, it can't revive itself at the End Phase. Also Special Summon can't revive it from the Graveyard effects like Call of the Haunted.

Solemn Judgment 2.0?

Many players disliked the limitation of Solemn Judgment, since it became harder to protect your spell and trap cards or force through big plays without taking a serious advantage (most negation cards require a discard instead of just Life Points, or have to negate a specific thing). This essentially gives those players back a different version of Solemn. There are going to be four big decks that take advantage of this card that would use Solemn Judgment otherwise. Gadget decks generally set multiple cards like Sakuretsu Armor, Dimensional Prison, Bottomless Trap Hole, and sometimes even the normal Trap Hole – having an extra way to prevent them from being Stormed, and helpless after the fact, will ensure Starlight finds its way into those decks. Gladiator Beasts like to lock the field down with some of those defensive traps as well as Gladiator Beast War Chariot – they played three Solemns to protect their setups back when it was legal and will most likely play a pair of Starlight Road to fill the void. Anti-meta decks – decks specifically tailored to beat what's currently being played in tournaments – generally require lots of back-row support to keep their lock going as well and can make good use of it. Finally, some old-school burn decks would use Solemns to save something like a charged Wave-Motion Cannon, a Level Limit – Area B, or a field with multiple monsters with burn effects.

Countering Starlight Road

I've gone on and on about how good the card is and what decks will be playing it in full force. So how do you deal with Starlight when it's your opponent that has it face-down? There are many options you're either probably already playing or could easily include in your deck. Half of the big "blow up the field" effects come from monsters – Judgment Dragon and Gladiator Beast Gyzarus are probably the biggest two right now. If your opponent plays Starlight Road against those two, My Body as a Shield can negate the Starlight and ensure your destruction effect goes through – it's expensive, but 1,500 LP is easily worth your opponent not getting a free Stardust and negating your card. Royal Oppression is another card with a cost most players might not think of, but remember that Starlight Road is able to Special Summon, and Oppression negates things that Special Summon. Truthfully, the way most people are going to deal with Starlight is playing more single-target destruction cards (or things that destroy multiple cards one at a time). Breaker the Magical Warrior, Dust Tornado, Nobleman of Extermination, and a vast number of other cards that deal with a single threat will stop Starlight Road from being of any use.

Mind games

Starlight Road has one other effect – an effect on the game itself. Certain cards, just by existing, change how some players play out their hands. In the earlier days of Yu-Gi-Oh!, an opponent playing no cards and ending his turn ensured you were going to get a free hit in, possibly several of them. Now, you have to be careful, since your opponent could drop Gorz, the Emissary of Darkness. Crush Card Virus single-handedly made players play fewer 1,500+ ATK monsters and forced players to find a way to fit a few Darks in their deck that could be tributed for it so they could use it themselves. Starlight Road will have the same effect – players will think before making a huge play, even if their opponent doesn't play Starlight Road at all. Players will also be able to "bluff" Starlight, setting three or four back-row without any protection for them – even if the opponent has Heavy, they may not play it because of what they suspect is their opponent trying to draw it out, negate it, and get a free beatstick.

There has been heated debate on Yu-Gi-Oh! message boards about whether Starlight Road should exist, or if it wouldn't be broken if it didn't include the free Stardust. Some cite that it actually takes away options, because there's no real way to bait a player into using Starlight Road incorrectly. Honestly, I'm all for anything that reduces the skill gap between a good player and a great one, and if Starlight Road ends up being a card that helps close that gap, then I hope it's here to stay for a long, long time. Until next time, play hard, play fair, and watch out for Starlight Road!

ASK THE POKÉMON GURU

SPECIAL PIKACHU EDITION

By Michael Lucas

Welcome back, trainers! As it's our special Pikachu issue, I picked out a few questions relating to the popular electric mouse. While many players know more about Pikachu than most Pokémon, there are a few things you might be surprised to find out about him.

Q: Is there any way to make Pikachu competitive in the video game?

- E. A.

A: Actually, there is. While there's not much you can do to boost his defenses, the Light Ball makes him worth trying – equip him with one of those, and Pikachu's Special Attack will be doubled! Given that there are multiple ways to get a legitimate Surfing Pikachu in the game, you'll be able to shock most other Pokémon into submission, as well as deal with the Ground-types that have Earthquake ready to ruin your day.

Q: What's the most expensive Pikachu item in existence?

- Anonymous

A: Well, there are two possible answers for this. Depending on how highly you value it, there was a Pikachu "Illustrator" card that is supposedly worth $20,000, since there are only six of it in the world. I'd be more inclined to believe that the Pikachu VW Beetle, an actual Pikachu-themed car, is the most expensive item at the moment. (Note to those who read the Pikachu TCG article – the Illustrator card is a trainer card that has Pikachu on it, and not an actual Pikachu card – that's why it wasn't mentioned there as most expensive.)

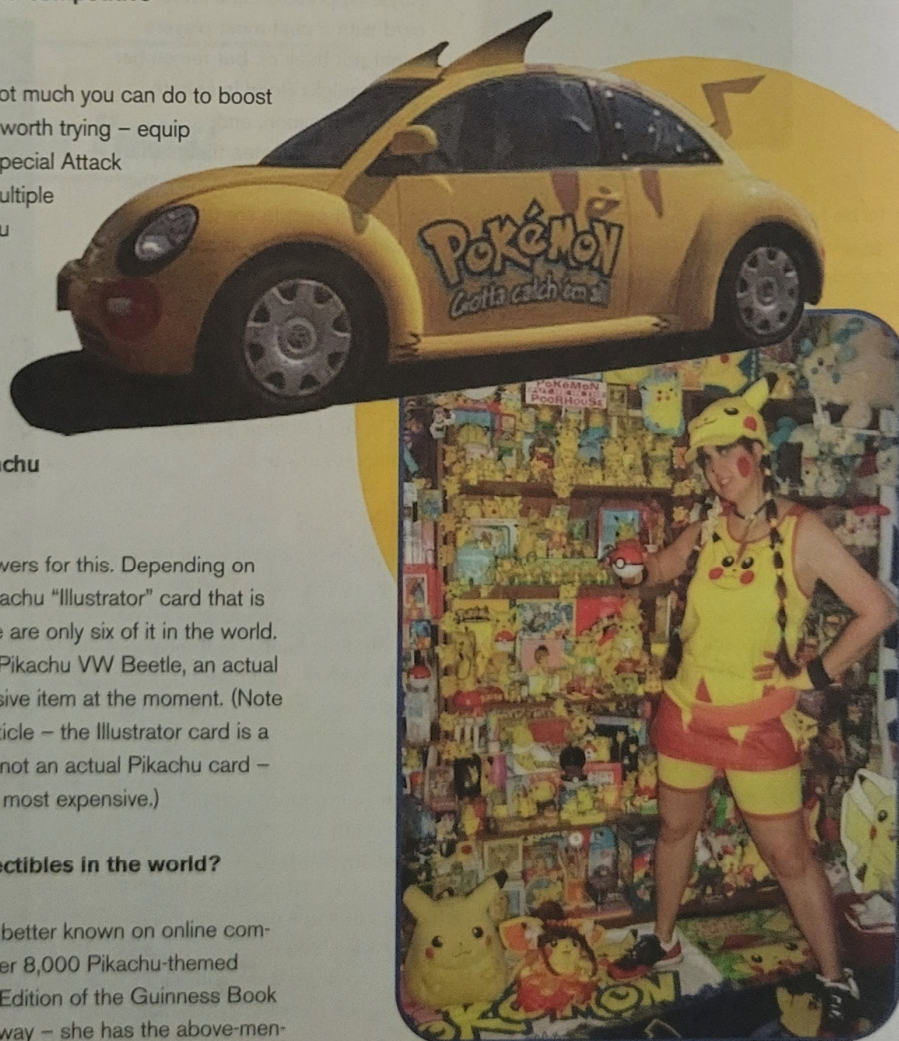

Q: Who has the most Pikachu collectibles in the world?

- Anonymous

A: That would be Belle Starenchak, better known on online communities as "PikaBelleChu." She has over 8,000 Pikachu-themed items and was included in the Gamers Edition of the Guinness Book of World Records last year. Oh, by the way – she has the above-mentioned Pikachu VW Beetle. It's certainly one of the most impressive Pokémon collections I've ever seen!

That's it for this month, trainers – next month we'll be back with our standard Ask the Guru questions, so please, be sure to send in your questions to pokemon@beckett.com.

EPISODE

This month, we're taking a break from the usual episode reviews. In celebration of this issue being entirely dedicated to everyone's favorite electric mouse Pokémon, Pikachu, we'll look at my top 10 favorite episodes of the Pokémon anime to feature Pikachu. With so many episodes to choose from, it was tough!

#10 HOCUS POKÉMON

The first episode on our list is a rather odd one. A novice magician accidentally turns Ash into a Pikachu. Even if it's only for a brief moment, seeing Ash as a Pikachu is priceless – he's adorable with his trademark Pokémon League baseball cap on. It's understandable that Ash would freak out, but as soon as he finds out his transformation is only temporary he starts to enjoy the experience. If Ash truly wants to be a Pokémon master one day, being a Pokémon definitely helps him understand what goes on inside the mind of a Pokémon. It's nice seeing "Ashachu" play with Pikachu, Murkrow, and Togepi. It's a shame that the spell only lasts for one episode – it would have been nice to see this story built into an arc over a few episodes.

#9 THE RIVALRY REVIVAL

This is the episode everyone was waiting for – after what seems like years of waiting, we finally get to see the showdown between lifelong rivals Ash and Gary. It's disappointing that Ash and Gary don't get to face off at the Pokémon League, but this battle more than makes up for it. Everyone wondered which starting Pokémon Gary had chosen – although this episode doesn't answer that (his starter is Squirtle), we find out that Gary has one powerful Eevee. This battle proves that you should never underestimate an opponent. Through strategy, Gary is able to defeat a much more powerful Pokémon in Pikachu with his Eevee, taking a page from Ash's book. It's amazing and shocking when Eevee lands a Skull Bash causing Pikachu to faint and lose the battle. It's a crushing defeat, but a wake-up call that Pikachu still has a lot more to learn.

#8 ENTER THE DRAGONITE

This is a memorable episode because Pikachu is able to do the seemingly impossible when he helps Ash win the Orange League. At the Orange League, Ash must face the champion, Drake, a trainer who possesses a powerful Dragonite. After mowing through Drake's first few Pokémon with relative ease, Ash hits a roadblock in the form of Dragonite. Dragonite is very powerful, due to its quick speed and strength. Dragonite is able to take out three of Ash's Pokémon – Charizard, Squirtle, and Tauros. It's all up to Pikachu, and the little electric mouse doesn't disappoint – after a few tense moments, Pikachu is able to land a crippling Thunder attack directly on top of Dragonite's head to knock it out. In my opinion, this is the most impressive victory to date for Pikachu – it's truly remarkable that he's able to defeat a Pokémon as powerful as Dragonite.

#7 GET THE SHOW ON THE ROAD!

This episode is entertaining, not only because it's the beginning of Ash's adventures in Hoenn, but because we're introduced to a new female protagonist in May. Team Rocket actually does some good by healing Pikachu, who had been under the weather for the last couple episodes with a fever, by accident. It's shocking to see Pikachu attack Ash – I'm glad he's back to his regular self at the end of the episode. The funniest moment in this episode, and the reason why it's one of my favorite Pikachu episodes, involves the destruction of another female trainer's bike. I know it's an accident, but I find it ironic that Pikachu destroys another bike – at least May is more forgiving than Misty and doesn't hold it over Ash's head for many years. I guess Pikachu just has it out for bikes.

#6 A SCARE TO REMEMBER!

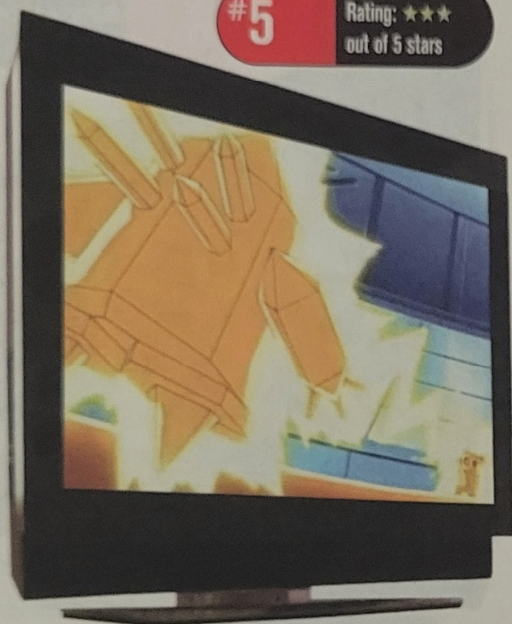

Call this episode hokey or cliché, but I really enjoy it. This episode is good because it breaks from the formula the writers seem to employ every episode. It's ironic when Ash and crew blast off – I guess they know how it feels for once. Pikachu proves that he's a kindhearted Pokémon, no matter what – when he loses his memory, he's so trusting of Team Rocket, treating them as if they are his true friends. It's truly heartwarming when Pikachu is kind enough to share an apple with Meowth, who realizes Jessie and James would never do the same. Seeing Ash doing the Team Rocket motto in one scene is priceless. I'm glad Pikachu gets his memory back in the end; I don't think Ash could bear to be apart from his best friend Pikachu.

#5 PACE - THE FINAL FRONTIER!

Similar to the Orange League, the Battle Frontier is an enjoyable side adventure that Ash embarks on over the course of a season. After gathering the Frontier Symbols, Ash earns an opportunity to face Pyramid King Brandon. The battle is intense – with so much on the line, Ash wants to make sure he makes the most of this opportunity. When the battle is down to just Ash's Pikachu and Brandon's Regice, it looks like Pikachu is overmatched. Pikachu proves that he's no ordinary Pokémon by becoming only the second non-legendary Pokémon in the anime – Ash's Charizard being the first – to defeat a legendary Pokémon. This is the redemption Pikachu has been waiting for over the years. It seems like Pikachu comes through for Ash during gym battles, but at the league finals, he always disappoints. This time Pikachu comes through for Ash, and it's probably Pikachu's biggest victory to date.

#4 WHEN POKÉMON WORLDS COLLIDE!

It's obvious Ash has a fondness for Pikachu – he's the only Pokémon he brings with him to start his journey in Sinnoh. That being said, the Diamond & Pearl season is easily my favorite season since the original season of Pokémon. Not only does it follow up the games closely, but it has the nastiest rival to date in Paul. The second episode shows us that Pikachu isn't as powerful as we may have perceived. In the first of many battles, it's Ash versus Paul: Pikachu versus Elekid. You'd think that Pikachu wouldn't have any problem against a pre-evolved Pokémon, but think again – Elekid shows us it's no slouch by going move-for-move with Pikachu. In the end, both Pokémon are too much for each other and the battle ends in a draw. If Ash and Pikachu were looking for a challenge then they got one and then some!

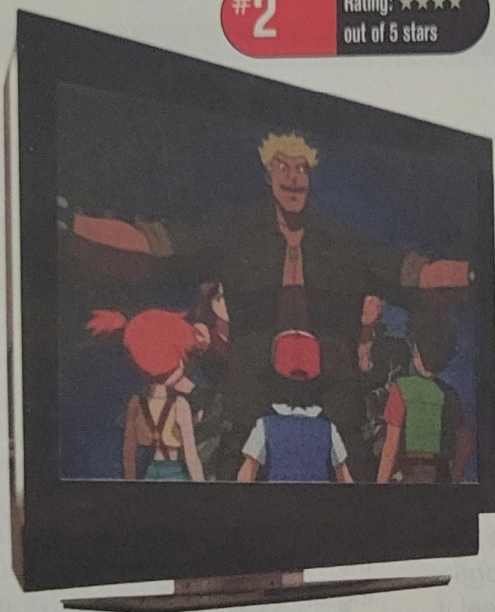

#3 PIKACHU'S GOODBYE

For longtime viewers of the anime, this episode aired years ago, but it's still memorable to this day. We all know that Ash is a caring trainer and will go to any length to please his Pokémon, but when it comes to releasing his favorite Pokémon, Pikachu, will he make the ultimate sacrifice? I think it's noble that Ash wants Pikachu to remain with the group of Pikachu – it's obvious that Ash's Pikachu is special and could protect the other Pikachu. Ash and Pikachu have only been together a few months, but it seems like it's been years. The cut scene showing Ash and Pikachu's greatest moments together brings a tear to my eye. It's really sad when the moment arrives for Ash to say farewell. It's nice that this experience brings Ash and Pikachu closer, when Pikachu decides to remain with Ash.

#2 ELECTRIC SHOCK SHOWDOWN

This episode is memorable for a couple reasons – after being awarded their first two gym badges, the bond between Ash and Pikachu is truly put to the test when Pikachu must face its evolved form, Raichu. We all know Pikachu is no ordinary Pokémon, but even for the special electric mouse, the task seems impossible. The determination of Pikachu is touching – it seems like Pikachu will do anything to please its trainer Ash. This is truly a defining moment in the anime – instead of taking the easy way out and evolving into a Raichu, Pikachu decides to gut it out and defeat Raichu based on speed and strategy. Seeing Pikachu in a hospital bed refusing the Thunder Stone is a moment I will never forget. I have a newfound respect for Pikachu after it successfully defeats Raichu – this is when we start to realize how special Pikachu truly is.

#1 POKÉMON I CHOOSE YOU!

This is where the adventure all begins, and it couldn't have begun in a more exciting fashion. For someone who hasn't been watching the anime from the beginning, it may be shocking – pun intended – to go back and watch the first episode and find out that Ash and Pikachu were anything except best friends. Pikachu is far from the loyal and disciplined Pokémon it is today – it starts out as a renegade Pokémon who refuses to respect or obey its new trainer Ash. Pikachu isn't afraid to voice its displeasure with its trainer in the form of a powerful Thunderbolt attack. Pikachu is so stubborn that Ash must drag it along the ground. After a life-and-death situation involving a flock of Spearow and one mean-spirited Fearow, Pikachu morphs into the Pikachu we all know and love today and comes to Ash's defense. This episode is epic and a must-see for all Pokémon viewers.

More HeartGold /SoulSilver

Just as it's the last batch of HeartGold and SoulSilver cards for "Secrets of Evolution," it'll be the last set of them for The C³ for now. Odds are you've seen some or all of these cards played against you by now, and even if you're not using decks that can utilize them, you should be prepared to deal with them. I've got four more cards to go over, so let's take a look!

Tyrogue (#33)

Evolution Chain: While it can evolve into Hitmonchan, Hitmonlee, or Hitmontop, it's not needed. Hitmontop (#5) might be used to pull Tyrogue out of sleep status in a pinch, but I honestly feel it isn't worth it.

Card Details: Tyrogue has the standard 30 HP, and has no weakness, resistance, or retreat cost.

Poké-Body: Sweet Sleeping Face

This is another instance of the weaker "Baby Rule." In addition to tipping off opponents early as to whether or not they could score a knockout, some effects turn off Poké-Bodies, which could leave Tyrogue wide open.

Mischievous Punch: 30 damage without an energy card is still decent; it's not as effective as it once was, but a 50/50 chance of dealing damage and then blocking an attack for a turn is still worth looking at. Unlike the original Tyrogue, you don't need a coin flip to land the 30 damage; while your opponent knows whether or not he's hitting Tyrogue the turn after, you can be sure that your 30 is getting through.

My rating: 3/5

I give Tyrogue a 3/5 rating on the first turn, and steadily decreasing further into the game. Tyrogue is mainly used as a Pokémon to punish players for only having a single Pokémon in play at the beginning of the game, and if that Pokémon was a baby, it allowed trainers to steal a quick win by bench out. It's still a good test against decks weak to Fighting Pokémon, as it can then dish out 60 damage without an energy investment.

Gyarados (#4)

Evolution Chain: Magikarp has always been a useless Pokémon, barring setups that allow a damaged Gyarados to take advantage of the older Magikarp cards' Flail attacks. HeartGold/SoulSilver's Magikarp has a pathetic 30 HP and can only dish out 10 damage.

By Michael Lucas

Card Details: Gyarados's 130 HP is very strong for a Stage 1, sometimes almost double what some Stage 1's are granted. The 2x Lightning weakness offsets that heavily if you're going up against that kind of deck, though the -20 Fighting resistance is a nice bonus. The retreat cost of three is tough to deal with though; like most big hitters, it requires Switch.

Attack 1: Hydro Splash

50 damage for three energy is only fair, but considering that a Double Colorless Energy can be used, this can be done with only two attachments.

Attack 2: Hyper Beam

80 damage for four energy? Again, is only fair; the energy discard makes it more appealing. The DCE gets this going in three turns and can force an opponent to build from the bench, putting your opponent on the defensive and letting you build other attackers on your bench.

My rating: 3 out of 5

Gyarados isn't the powerhouse that the "Pokémon Prime" generally are, but for a Water deck that has another reason to use Double Colorless energy and isn't using Feraligatr Prime, it might see some play.

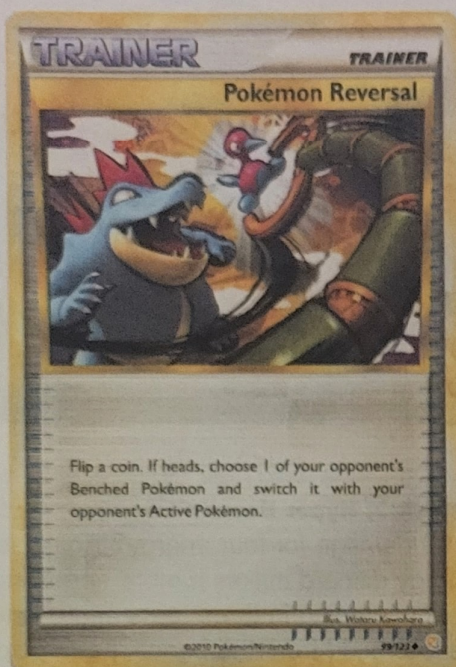

Pokémon Reversal (#99)

Advantages: Generally, every time this card is successful, it's netting a prize, bringing in a weaker or damaged Pokémon of your opponent's for your main attacker to finish off. A weaker version of the old Gust of Wind trainer card is still worth using. (Many older players consider the "d" on Gust of Wind to be a typo, as you generally win when you play it.)

Disadvantages: Coin flip. You can't count on it to win the game for you anymore, and even if you have two of them, there's still a one-in-four chance that you won't get the switch-out you need.

My rating: 4 out of 5

A 50% chance of an instant prize or setback of your opponent's strategy is still enough to risk the flip.

thing – is the major advantage. It's basically Pokémon Trader in a new form. It combos well with other cards like Pokémon Collector that might give you one more Pokémon than you need.

Disadvantages: It's a "minus one" – you have one less card after you use it than before. If you don't have a Pokémon in your hand you no longer need, you're unable to make use of this. If the Pokémon you put back is useless to you at the time, there's the chance you could draw it again.

Pokémon Communication (#98)

Advantages: Getting any Pokémon you need out of your deck at will – whether it's basic, evolution, prime, legend, or any-

My rating: 4/5

It has a cost, but it will definitely bring you one step closer to the setup you need to have in play if you're able to pay that cost.

That's it for this set, trainers!

Next time we'll be looking at cards from the Revived Legends expansion, and then general competitive cards after that. Until then, play hard and play fair!

HOW TO USE

What's Listed

Products listed in the Price Guide typically: 1) are produced by licensed manufacturers, 2) are widely available and 3) have market activity on single items.

What the Columns Mean

The LO and HI columns reflect current retail selling ranges. The HI column on the right generally represents the full retail selling price. The LO column on the left generally represents the lowest price one would expect to find with extensive shopping.

What the Arrows Mean

Up arrows denote prices that went up since the last issue. Down arrows denote prices that went down since the last issue. Arrows don't mean a card or set is "going up" or "going down."

Grading

All cards in the Price Guide are based on Near Mint to Mint condition. Damaged cards are generally sold for 25 to 75 percent of Mint value. Toy prices are based on mint condition. Toys that are loose (out of package), are generally sold for 50 percent of the listed price.

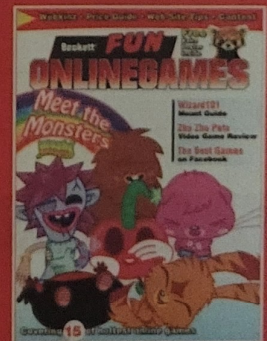

Currency

This Price Guide is intended to reflect the entire North American market. All listed prices are in U.S. dollars.

MONSTER HUNTER TRI

Capcom's series makes its long-awaited U.S. Wii debut

By Michael Lucas

TITLE: MONSTER HUNTER TRI
DEVELOPER: CAPCOM
GENRE: ACTION/RPG
ESRB RATING: TEEN

Monster Hunter fans have been waiting for their series to hit the Wii for a good while, and Monster Hunter Tri definitely doesn't disappoint! All the heart-pumping, monster-slaying action from its predecessors is still there, but does the game live up to expectations and the hype? Here are my two cents.

Storyline

Your character is destined to save the great Moga Village, whose sea trade is being ransacked by a vicious sea monster, and it's up to you to stop it. But you can't just take him on right away — you'll need to build up armor, weapons, items, and learn the ropes before you can take on such a behemoth.

The game starts you out by sending you on quests in nearby areas to take on smaller monsters and collect items you'll need to create traps, make potions, and craft other items necessary to your life as a Monster Hunter. Back in the village, you've got different characters (blacksmith, cook, etc.), who each take what you've collected and help you by forging new items. The game's first few hours serve as a nice learning curve to get your feet wet with this title.

Graphics

The game's visuals are incredible — the monsters look very realistic, and the details are breathtaking. Usually, when it comes to Wii titles, I'll give a pass on mediocre graphics based on the system's limitations, but this title definitely doesn't need that. Whether you're fighting battles on land or underwater, Monster Hunter Tri throws an amazing amount of eye candy at you.

Gameplay

My first foray into the action/RPG genre was all the way back with Secret of Mana; Tri definitely beats that on the difficulty scale. That's not a bad thing, though. It just means you can't hack and slash at enemies and expect victory every time — try that and you'll end up being monster chow more often than not. Once you've started an attack, you have to wait for that animation to finish out before you can do anything else. A missed attack make a joint effort in taking down big bad-dies. Monster Hunter Tri does this fairly well — there's a bit of setup if you're looking to meet up with friends you've already made and find each other in the game, but it's easy enough to do.

There's a noticeable difference between a regular hunt with friends and a boss fight — the boss fights are seamless and everything flows perfectly. However, hunting down normal enemies seems a bit off if only because of the lag — while you're clearly striking an enemy on your screen, your friends may see you attacking thin air, and that same enemy may be a foot or two away from you. Despite that, the online play just is more fun than going it alone, and it allows for new strategies in taking down bosses that you wouldn't be able to do in alone.

The game does have a few minor flaws, however. I've already addressed one with the lag in non-boss online play. Also, some animations run too long for what they are, leaving the player feeling cheated; for example, if you use a health item you might not be able to respond quick enough, causing a monster to slam your character to the ground. One big complaint is having to use the Wiimote, even if it's not your controller of choice, to catalog monsters.

Every time you beat a monster, you have to point your remote at the screen, and grab an icon on the screen and drag it to add that monster to your bestiary. This system seems pointless to me, and a needless aggravation.

Overall, Monster Hunter Tri is a great game. Both long-time fans of the Monster Hunter series and new players alike will feel like they got their money's worth from this one. This one still isn't "there" yet; there are enough issues, both minor and major, that I would hope are resolved by the time the next Monster Hunter title comes out. Despite those problems, it's still definitely worth picking up.

My rating: 4 stars out of 5 leaves you open to assault for what seems like an eternity, so be careful and attack wisely. Equipment isn't as simple as "just equip the strongest weapon and armor" either — the differing attacking speeds and strength of some weapons and the differences in weaknesses in various pieces of armor require actual thought going into each quest or major battle.

FUN TRIVIA

Special Pikachu edition

In honor of this issue, the entire set of trivia questions for will be Pikachu related.
How well do you know the famous electric mouse?

By Alex Lucard

#1

When Pokémon Gold and Silver was first announced, Nintendo showed Marill off as one of the first second-generation Pokémon. Many people at the time thought for some reason that Marill was an evolution of Pikachu, although this was later proved to be incorrect. What was the nickname Marill has earned because of this?

#2

What is Pikachu's Pokedex entry number in the National Dex?

#3

In the first two generations of Pokémon, where could you find a wild Pikachu?

#4

What is the only game where you can get Pikachu as a starter Pokémon?

#5

In the Yellow Forest DLC for the Pokéwalker, you can encounter Pikachu with two different HMs it normally can't learn. Which HMs are they?

Which Kanto Gym Leader uses the evolved form of Pikachu?

#7

What special item doubles a Pikachu's special attack?

#8

What attack types are super-effective against Pikachu?

#9

Ash's Pikachu has been made into TCG cards before, but none of them have ever had an English-language release. How many of them have there been?

#10

In HeartGold and SoulSilver, what level is Red's Pikachu when you finally encounter it?

EXTRA CREDIT TIME!

EXTRA CREDIT: Originally, Pikachu was not the official mascot of Pokémon, nor was it Ash's original Pokémon in the pilot episode script. Which Pokémon was?

ANSWERS: 1. Pikachu; 2. 25; 3. The Viridian Forest; 4. Pokémon Yellow; 5. Fly and Surf; 6. Lt. Surge; 7. Light Ball; 8. Ground and Grass; 9. Two; 10. Level 88; Extra Credit: Clefairy

ANSWERS:

UNOFFICIAL COLLECTOR

SUBSCRIPTION CHANGE NOTICE

Dear Valued Subscribers,

Due to increasing paper and postage costs, the frequency of your Pokémon Unofficial Collector magazine has changed to bi-monthly. This frequency ensures that we can continue to bring Pokémon to you with no increase in the price of the magazine.

Rest assured, only the frequency of your issues will change — there will be no change to the total number of issues you receive.

Pokémon will continue to bring you all the great coverage you expect; including coverage of all 493 Pokémon monsters, collectibles, video games, cheat codes, plus bonus coverage of other hot animation video games and more!

For questions on your subscription, please call (800)764-6278 or write subscriptions@beckett.com

Thank you for your continued patronage of Pokémon magazine.

Warmly,

Doug Kale
